- Staging:
 - » The Project is intended to be constructed over several stages.
 - » The first stage is anticipated to take 2 years, and involves the construction of between 30-50 WTGs, transmission and site management infrastructure needed to generate 288MW of electricity.

4.0 General project plan

For the purposes of section 60Q(1)(c) and section 60Q(2)(b) of the Act, a plan indicating generally on the project land where uses and developments are to occur within the project area is shown below. The areas shown in green represent turbine exclusion zones, within which the construction of WTGs is constrained by such factors as

- Topography (slope)
- Orange-bellied parrot coastal migration
- Forested vegetation communities
- Sensitive receptors (housing)
- Hydrological (the banks of waterways)
- Existing public roads, and transmission lines, and
- Areas within 100m of the Project Land boundary

5.0 The proponent

6.0 Project Eligibility Attributes

For the purposes of section 60Q(1)(e) the attributes of the project specified in section 60M(1) of the Act, which, in my opinion, are such that the project is eligible to be declared a major project are –

- the project will have a significant impact on, or make a significant contribution to, the Cradle Coast region's economy, environment or social fabric in that:
 - The Project will make a significant contribution to the Cradle Coast region of Tasmania and the State as a whole.

- Planned capital investment of approximately $5 billion is supported by operational expenditure estimated to average $673million per annum over a project life of 30 years. This will be of considerable economic benefit, generating employment in project planning, construction, and operation.
- The Project will offer significant opportunities for employment in the Cradle Coast region, providing up to 170 construction jobs, a further 16 full-time equivalent positions in the initial operational phase, and further jobs as successive project stages are implemented.
- The activity and employment created during the life of the Project will increase consumer spending within the region, benefiting local businesses.

(b) the Project is of strategic importance to the Cradle Coast region, as:

- It will produce enough renewable energy to achieve the Tasmanian Renewable Energy Target of 200% renewable energy by 2040, equating to an additional 10,500GW hours;
- The production of this level of low-cost renewable energy will present opportunities for the development of renewable hydrogen production and e-fuel facilities, contributing to the Tasmanian Government's aim of becoming a significant global supplier of renewable hydrogen for export and domestic use by 2030;
- The proponent has expressed its willingness to partner with the Tasmanian Government in support of regional housing and community infrastructure objectives; and
- The Project aligns with the regional profile, strategy and policy directions stated in the Cradle Coast Regional Land Use Strategy (CCRLUS).

(c) the Project is of significant scale and complexity such that:

- It is the largest windfarm currently proposed in Tasmania, and bigger than any existing windfarm in Australia;
- The scale of the project and its location on Crown land offers regional benefits, extending beyond the West Coast municipality in which it is situated;
- Approvals will be required under the Parks and Wildlife Service's reserve activity assessment process, and under a variety of legislation, including the Land Use Planning and Approvals Act 1993, Threatened Species Protection Act 1995, Aboriginal Heritage Act 1975, Nature Conservation Act 2002, Crown Lands Act 1976 and the Environmental Management and Pollution Control Act 1994; and
- The Project also requires approval under the Environment Protection and Biodiversity Conservation Act 1999 (CTH).
